GH-COMMISSION . MALAYSIAN HIGH COMMISSION, NEW DELHI, INDIA - The new Malaysian High Commission in Delhi is intended to house the expanding needs of Malaysia's diplomatic mission within a 5-acre compound in the ambassadorial district of India's capital. The project comprises of offices for various official departments, a relocated High Commissioners' Residence and a Multipurpose Hall. The main design challenge as in most embassies, was to organize the relationship between the different components on plan with the appropriate degree of distance, security and privacy. To express its Malaysian character a coloured-fritted glass envelope with Malaysian batik motifs was introduced in various parts of the project. Each translucent panel has a different motif superimposed upon it to create an interesting effect of shifting patterns in shadow and light. This language of Malaysian identity is further evoked by incorporating traditional craft decorative motifs to the underside of the overhangs of the facade. The Malaysian High Commission was completed in December 2015 for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Malaysia.
